The four elements that make up the Elden Ring--Slayer, Defender, Ranger, and Mage--are the base of the game. • The Slayer in the Graveyard: The Slayer is the embodiment of brute strength. She is invincible against a party of other Slayers in combat. • The Defender in the City: The Defender is an athlete who excels at close range fights. The battle most dragons hunger for is taking out its opponents with lightning speed. • The Ranger in the Field: The Ranger is a constant presence in the field. Through constant travel, a Ranger always has a vast range of sight. • The Mage in the Dungeon: The Mage is the best spell caster in the game because he knows the mysterious power of the runes which bind all life.

I had always wanted to try an RPG with anime aesthetics, and with Last Knight I was lucky enough to find someone who could deliver the goods. The 2D art is superb, the music is awesome, and the voice acting is all around good too. The main story is fairly well paced and complete, although the twist can be a bit infuriating at times. Luckily that doesn't slow down the pace of the game very much, allowing you to enjoy the story and gameplay at a satisfying pace. I may have a slight problem with the game though, a slight disconnect between the anime style and the game world. There's times where the fantasy elements seem a bit unrealistic. But this is a minor point I wouldn't keep me from enjoying the game, which is already more than most of today's games deliver. The gameplay has a few controls that are a bit hazy at the beginning, but it's fairly simple to pick up once you get used to it. You can choose either a male or a female protagonist. The personality of the protagonist does not change your basic role. You will raise your weapon, go to battle, and sometimes talk to other party members. The party members will grow in age as you do, and they will need food to sustain themselves. These three things are all obtained through battles. In a basic sense, you win or lose a battle based on the total attack points you've invested. When you win, you will gain EXP (experience points), which will allow you to level up, allowing you to gain more EXP. You gain EXP by defeating monsters, and in level ups. However, you can also use items to increase your EXP points. If you have a lot of EXP, you'll be able to gain new abilities. If your EXP is already at its highest level, you will gain additional EXP bonuses, which allow you to see your stats not increase, but show you the stats of your party members. In a basic sense, there are 5 types of weapons, each with their own unique abilities. Examples of these types are the Fire type (such as the bow of a Warrior) or the HP type (such as the sword of a Rogue). The weapon slot determines the type of weapons you can use, so you will be able to buy new weapons as you level up, and new accessories as you achieve higher levels. Each weapon has a set number of attacks, and you can change the number of attacks using items. When equipped, you use only those bff6bb2d33
