Alan Hausrath, Head of Marketplace, Magnusson Agency This is the first in a series of 12 articles on branding ambassadors with the potential to become leaders of change. The second part will appear next week. Is there something of yourself - your intentions, your lifestyle, your values - that you want to keep hidden? Maybe you have a secret side, perhaps an acid tongue in private, a secluded life that few people know about. You may be like Mercedes-Benz, a company that is known for building “a better life for a better drive”. And the car company also looked at the success of Benetton’s use of football stars to promote their brand. “For ads in general, the Super Bowl is the biggest challenge; it is a time span which has become a very big event where every second counts”, explains the Ford executive. “But this time around the game was held in the future, in February, in Los Angeles. In the end the Porsche car company won the game, but it doesn't mean that Porsche is better or worse than
