WHAT do you call a "mobile-centric communication platform" that includes mobile phones, laptops, and tablets but is independent of the network infrastructure? If you're the government of the United States and you're trying to build the citizen-centric mobile internet, you could call it the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) Hyperconnected Networks (HCN) program. But it might sound better if you called it a completely new government agency. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), which needs no introduction, is already the largest federal agency. It spent $13.1 billion in 2013, including $2.5 billion in construction and $1.8 billion in goods and services. Its budget is expected to increase to about $14.4 billion in 2014. That's only 3.2 percent of the total federal budget, and nowhere near the $100-plus billion per year that the Department of Defense spends. Even for a very large agency, however, the CDC is small when compared with what the DHS will be able to spend. The DHS oversees more than 240 separate agencies and 5,000 units, which together form about 40 percent of the government's total workforce. In fiscal year 2013, the DHS spent about $58 billion, including $19 billion for construction. That's about 11.7 percent of the federal budget, though it's already nearly two-thirds higher than the CDC's budget. In a year, the DHS will easily outspend the CDC. In five years, the DHS will be spending nearly ten times as much as the CDC. The CDC's budget is up even from last year. In fiscal year 2012, Congress appropriated a

To determine whether toothbrushes (TBs) can serve as vehicle for transmission of Actinomyces spp. The primary source of TBs of dental students was examined. Swab samples were collected from all extracted anterior tooth surfaces of TBs of third-year dental students, and were subjected to culturing. In total, 162 TBs were collected. Actinomyces species were detected in 24 (22.1%) of 108 TBs from dentists, and in 5 (13.9%) of 37 TBs from dental assistants. Actinomyces naeslundii was frequently isolated, and the detection rate was significantly higher in dentists than in dental assistants (P Guido's Python takes out Google's V8 JavaScript engine - known ===== jwr For the wrong reason.
