and Crimea “You cannot say that we are taking a million dollars.” Not even the winner, Vladimir Putin, has yet taken a single euro from Ukrainian taxes, Gazprom deputy chief executive Alexander Medvedev has declared. “You cannot say that we are taking a million.” That’s because Putin has yet to take UAH2.4bn out of the national budget for 2014, which has saddled him with a mammoth deficit which remains at just below 20 per cent of budget revenues. To put that into context, it’s nearly as high as North Korea’s entire deficit. “We will reduce the deficit as soon as the money is in the budget,” Putin said. As for Crimea, Putin is disputing the EU-backed referendum held there in March, which declared Crimea a part of Russia. “Those who say that Crimea is ours, that is our land, our historical land, they are wrong. That is not Russian land.” It’s time to register for Russian passports (or passports with the flag and the word ‘annexed’). The number of people applying for Russian passports was up by 25% in June, about 9,000 people, compared with last year. Source: ATMENA, Russian Ministry of Internal Affairs Advertisement “‘We’re going in to save some, very young guys and women from the Soviet, from the conflict,’ he said. ‘I go there, and it is a mess, the floor needs to be cleaned and it needs to be sprayed. We’re cleaning the floor. We’re finding guys in the local coffee shop - these are not combat engineers, these are guys who work in the building; or guys - as we rescued a few more - out in the boats.’” Stranded people have been desperately trying to get back to Ukraine, a complex matter which will involve all locals, not just residents of the nearby peninsula of Crimea. “Last time I was there, the ferry we were supposed to use, the Tsunami in November 2004 had thrown hundreds of people off, so it was no longer functional. We passed dozens of people from Bukovina and the north trying to get to Kherson,” Mig was said to have told staff. “Mig and his team are the ones to get the initial infrastructure of the people who were waiting for flights,

I want to make this like this (added by me), if you need, edit text to your desired one. I hope it worked. Thanks for that. :) The sine qua non of the treatment of blast injury is the restoration of tissue perfusion. This invention is intended to stabilize further the condition of burn patients as an adjunct to the major objective of minimizing damage and inflammation. Despite the fact that numerous approaches have been pursued, some success has been achieved. This has been identified principally by: (1) the use of hyperimmune whole blood from animals immunized to advance the macrophage mediated clearance, reparation, and fusion of damaged cells; and (2) phototherapy, principally by intense UVA (ultraviolet light, long wavelength, 574-361 nm), through blood to skin contact.SISU X 2009 NSW Women's Open week Yesterday Team SISU held our headquarters in the Suncorp NSW Women's Open Club at Montvale, more commonly known as the 'Heartbreak Hut', while hundreds of competitors gathered at Gilgandra Country Club for this week's Mid-Hudson SBS Women's Open. Sarah Allen at Yet to Know had a look under the wacky hoods and sought the wisdom of a few of the carnival master's to gain some unique insight into today's flavour of winter golf.
